

WHY THE HYENA LIMPS

Once upon a time, in the African savannah, there was a mischievous hyena named Hank who loved to play pranks on all the animals. He would hide in the tall grass and jump out to scare them, or he would steal their food and run away laughing hysterically. Hank was notorious for his naughty antics, and all the animals were fed up with him.

One sunny day, as Hank was sneaking up on a group of zebras to startle them, he accidentally stepped on a thorny acacia tree branch and got a painful thorn stuck in his paw. He yelped in pain and limped away, hopping on three legs.

Hank tried his best to ignore the throbbing pain, but the thorn was stuck deep in his paw, and it made it difficult for him to walk properly. He stumbled and tripped over rocks, and he couldn't run as fast as he used to. His mischievous pranks came to a sudden halt, much to the relief of the other animals.

One day, while Hank was sulking by the watering hole, feeling sorry for himself, he saw a wise old tortoise named Tobi sunbathing nearby. Hank hobbled over to Tobi and asked for his help. Tobi, being kind and wise, agreed to help Hank and carefully removed the thorn from his paw using his sharp beak.

Hank was immensely grateful and apologized to Tobi for all the trouble he had caused in the past. Tobi forgave him and gave him some valuable advice. He told Hank that his pranks had hurt the feelings of other animals and disrupted the peace of the savannah, and that he should use his cleverness for good instead of mischief.

Hank took Tobi's advice to heart and promised to change his ways. He went around the savannah, apologizing to all the animals he had pranked and making amends. He offered to help the zebras find food, played hide-and-seek with the elephants' calves, and told funny jokes that made everyone laugh.

As Hank mended his ways, he made new friends and became a beloved member of the savannah community. The other animals appreciated his sense of humor and his willingness to help, and they forgave him for his past misdeeds. Hank learned the true meaning of friendship and the importance of kindness.

From that day on, Hank never played a mean prank again. He lived happily in the savannah, always putting smiles on the faces of his friends with his jokes and antics. And although his paw never fully healed, he never complained about it and instead used it as a reminder to always be kind and considerate to others.

And that's why, to this day, you can still see Hank the hyena limping slightly, but always with a big smile on his face, bringing joy and laughter to all the animals of the African savannah.

WHY A GIRAFFE HAS A LONG NECK

Once upon a time in the lush savannah of Africa, there was a young giraffe who loved to explore and play with his friends. He had a unique feature that made him stand out - he had a very long neck!

One sunny day, as he was munching on leaves from the tall acacia trees, he overheard a group of animals giggling nearby. Curious, he approached them to find out what was so funny.

"I can't understand why you have such a long neck!" chuckled a cheeky monkey. "It's so funny looking!"

The young giraffe felt a little self-conscious and started to doubt his appearance. He had never really thought about why he had such a long neck. So, he decided to embark on a quest to find out the real reason behind it.

He went to his wise old friend, Mr. Tortoise, and asked him about his long neck. Mr. Tortoise, with his slow and steady wisdom, explained to him that long ago, all animals had short necks just like his friends. But there was a big problem in the animal kingdom - the trees had grown taller, and the animals couldn't reach the leaves anymore!

The animals tried to jump and climb the trees, but they failed miserably. They were hungry and unhappy. That's when a group of animals, including the young giraffe's ancestors, came up with a brilliant plan. They decided to stretch their necks as much as they could to reach the delicious leaves at the top of the trees. And over time, their necks grew longer and longer, just like his!

The young giraffe was amazed by the story and felt proud of his long neck. He realized that his uniqueness had a purpose - it helped him and his fellow giraffes find food easily in the tall trees, which made them healthy and happy.

Armed with this newfound knowledge, he went back to his friends and proudly told them the story of why he had a long neck. His friends were fascinated and stopped giggling. The monkey even apologized for making fun of him.

From that day on, the young giraffe never felt self-conscious about his long neck again. He continued to explore the savannah, play with his friends, and enjoy the delicious leaves from the tall trees.

And whenever he saw a short-necked animal struggling to reach the leaves, he would offer his help with a big grin on his face. His friends would often joke, "Hey, Mr. Stretchy Neck, can you reach that leaf for me?" And they would all burst into laughter, knowing that his long neck was indeed a blessing in disguise.

And so, the legend of why a giraffe has a long neck spread throughout the animal kingdom, and the young giraffe lived happily ever after, knowing that being different was something to be proud of. The end.

Moral of the story: Embrace your uniqueness and be proud of who you are, because everyone has a purpose and a reason for being different. And a little laughter and kindness can make any situation better!